

Statement: Heckmondwike and Brexit

Heckmondwike is one of the UK's largest manufacturers of fibre-bonded carpets, including its ever-popular Supacord range, which is installed in thousands of education establishments throughout the country.

As a result, the company wishes to clarify how Brexit will impact its customers.

Although one of the main certainties of Brexit is its uncertainty, the company would like to inform its customers, whether they are end-users, specifiers, architects/developers or flooring contractors, that Heckmondwike envisages no significant issues over the coming months when it comes to supplying products to UK-based customers.

With a proud heritage of British manufacturing, where possible, Heckmondwike works closely with UK suppliers, resulting in almost 90 per cent of its suppliers being based in the country. The balance is made up of a varied mixture of EU and non-EU states.

Heckmondwike also holds significant stocks of both fibre raw material, alongside finished carpet rolls and tiles - with its manufacturing processes operating throughout the year to provide the latter.

Not only does this allow the company to continue to deliver quality customer service by providing a large percentage of its fibre bonded carpet from stock, but it also negates any potential supply difficulties, either pre or post Brexit.

If you have any further queries regarding the potential impact of Brexit, please contact the company's UK & Ireland Sales Manager, Bob Mortimer, using either bmortimer@heckmondwike-fb.co.uk or 07885 137926.